

Tourist Visa

Canada allows people to visit the country on many different purposes, one of which is to visit for travel or to see your family. While there are many visa exempt countries, others do need permission for visiting and staying in Canada for a precise period of time. This procedure is called Temporary Resident Visa.

Any person who wishes to visit Canada for a short-term stay, either for studies, a short-term course, a short-term work assignment or even a family vacation, can visit the country with help of a good immigration consulting firm. Canadian visitors will need to apply for a visitor's visa and attain it before they can be allowed to enter the country.

Below are some of the prerequisites that you need to follow to get a tourist visa for Canada.

- Must be absolutely healthy, and may need to undergo medical examination from CIC panel physician
- Should have a valid passport, proof of identity or other important travel documents
- Must satisfy the CIC official that you have strong ties to your present country (for example, a job, home and family)
- Must satisfy the CIC official that you will leave Canada as per the end of your sanctioned stay duration
- Should have sufficient funds in your bank account for the duration of your stay in Canada
- May need to come up with an invitation letter from someone who lives in Canada

Canada Tourist Visa Categories

There are various categories of Canada's visitor visa. You can opt for one depending on the purpose of your visit. Each category of the tourist visa will have different eligibility criteria alongside a different process for the application.
